River Valley Civilizations

Name:            Class:
Teacher:         Date:

Directions: Place each item in the correct order.

ITEMBANK:
Babylon  Cuneiform  Euphrates  Fertile Crescent  Hammurabi's Code  Harappa  Hieroglyphic  Indus  Mesopotamia
Nile  Tigris  Yellow River

This is the name for the Ancient River Valley Civilization located between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers, meaning "the land between two rivers."

This is the name given to the rich agricultural land in the ancient Middle East, from the Tigris and Euphrates westward to the Mediterranean Sea.

This is the early form of writing created by the Sumerians, consisting of pictographs drawn on clay tablets with a stylus.

This is the early form of writing created by the Egyptians and written on papyrus or wood.

This is the longest river in Africa and was the cradle of the ancient Egyptian kingdoms.
This river flows from Turkey through Iraq and was the eastern-most of the two major Mesopotamian Rivers.

This river flows from Turkey through Iraq and was the western-most of the two major Mesopotamian Rivers.

This 2,000 mile long river was once the center of the Harappan civilization thousand of years ago in ancient India.

This river is the second longest in China and is known for its thick deposits of silt.

This is the name given to one of the oldest known set of written-down laws in world history, and is named for the Babylonian king who enacted them in the 1700s BCE.

This is one of the most powerful city-states along the Euphrates River in Ancient Mesopotamia.

This is the name of both a city-state and an ancient civilization found along the Indus River in modern-day Pakistan.